

Wölves Play Café

The Playce Project

Stories

I didn't know this Garden was here before we came to the session.

Why do you come to Wolves Play Café and Wolves in the Woods?

He absolutely loves being outside. I'm sure I made a comment before about just his sense of wonder when he comes in. There's so much to look at and so much to see and do. Just getting outside is good for his health as well and for his wellbeing. And also his motor skills, being able to move around different ground. Like there was a slippery surface over there – you saw that (early we had a conversation about J learning to get up by himself after falling on a slippery surface – R recognised this was good for him to learn to keep himself safe.) It's a great safe place as well.

What do you get out of it, as well as your little one?

A sense of community. Like you guys, the team are fantastic, helpful, and it feels like, I can kind of let my hair down a little bit and relax a bit because he's happy exploring all he activities you guys have set out.

Have you seen your little one problem solve or use any investigation skills when playing here?

Yes, absolutely, because we've come for a few weeks now he knows the way around. So even this morning, he wanted to go straight down the path, he knows the route around now. And all of the little things in the basket he's started to know how to use them. Like I said, climbing and even right now he's pulling a rope (playing with the pulley system) pulling something along, he loves all the different activities.
